

SASSI LLC: Ambassadors for Mobility in Later Life

The aim of the Ambassadors for mobility in later-life is to promote the advantages of mobility and work experience for career redirection and CPD amongst older workers, unretirees and job seekers. Innovative approaches to the provision of work experiences are seen as a tactic for stimulating career revitalisation and change. The purpose of these experiences is to learn a new skill, pursue passions and interests, or simply reflect on a new career direction – both in national and transnational mobility contexts.

Enabling Mobility in Later-life

Who are the Ambassadors?

An ambassador promotes the advantages of mobility in later life and advocates the inclusion of short-term or long-term transnational work experiences and/or collaboration. An ambassador for later-life mobility is in close contact with older people (above 55), provides information on different mobility options and actively supports those who want to make a mobility experience.

What does the Manual contain?

The Ambassadors' Manual for Mobility in Later-life is a self-study resource available in 5 languages on the SASSI Hub, further enhanced by group activities. It contains 5 chapters:

- The benefits of working and studying abroad
- Types of mobilities
- The role and competences of an Ambassador
- Mobility in practice
- The SASSI LLC mobility database

Find a mobility!

In order to help prospective Ambassadors and older workers find a mobility experience suitable for their needs, we have collected organisations providing opportunities in the partner countries and across Europe. The mobility database allows for searching by type of mobility, country, duration, and age range.

Looking Ahead

Soon we will be meeting the Ambassadors of mobility in later life in person. A group of participants from partner countries will attend a design thinking course in Vienna, where they will brainstorm on ways to exchange later life careers.
